Memorandum of Understanding

The offer of a place to study at Queens' College Cambridge is a privilege sought after by many talented men and women, and one that confers lifelong benefits. With this privilege comes responsibility. By coming into residence you are accepting certain requirements that will apply to your academic performance throughout your undergraduate career.

The College expects you to work to the best of your ability in order to fulfil your academic potential. We expect you to attend lectures, Supervisions, and other teaching and learning exercises as advised by your Director of Studies, to submit all requisite academic work on time and to the best of your ability, and to strive towards excellence in all your academic endeavours.

We require you to prioritize your academic commitments above your leisure activities. Failure to attend scheduled teaching and learning exercises, failure to submit the work required of you, or failure in University examinations may be found to constitute 'neglect of studies'. Undergraduates who are found to have been in persistent neglect of their studies are liable to disciplinary sanctions under College Regulations and may be required to withdraw from the University.

You are requested to sign this document before coming in to residence, in order to confirm that you understand it and will strive to carry out the academic responsibilities that you undertake by accepting a place as an undergraduate at Queens' College.

Signed, on behalf of the College
