Easter Term Coffee, Tea, and biscuits return! (Donuts on Fridays)

Beginning on May 6 we'll be serving our readers refreshments in the Munro Room at 11.00 on Mondays/Wednesdays/Fridays. So If you're in the library on those mornings we hope you'll be able to come down for a nice sugar/caffeine break with your friends.

New Books in Queens' Student Library (continued)

Many thanks to the many students and DoS who've provided us with book requests and informed advice on developing the Queens' collection this year. Your interest & knowledge is ESSENTIAL to our aim to enhance the library as a valued resource for Queens' undergraduate teaching and learning. Thanks (in part) to finance from the alumni Adopt a Book Fund, 1,419 books have been bought this academic year (that's a lot!) thereby enabling us to make substantial improvements in most subject areas.

Rare Glimpse into England's medieval past: See our blog about an exciting re-discovery in Queens' Old

Library of some 15th century manuscript fragments from a medieval poem called the 'Prick of Conscience': <http://t.co/roiqEyHrhi>

Tons of good luck to all students taking exams this term !

The Student Advice Service have some great advice on how to handle exam pressure. <http://goo.gl/5zpFKn>.

Remember, Queens' Library has a full (now updated) 10-year run of examination papers covering all subjects.
